Women unite!
Rapists! Beware! Sisters prepare!

Women learned self-defense battles at the OW Rape Conference. In sequence above, women practice what to do when attacked from the front when someone grabs your bag. A strong kick will send the assailant scurrying away.

The issue which persists untold and unspoken by most women is one of means of suppressing their people and until we can successfully confront and eliminate these ideas within ourselves, liberation will never be experienced by women. We have been conditioned to the point that we turn on our personal problems. Devoting time we leave our home and walk down the street instead of realizing where we women become "chicks" and are fair game in society.

Even though the threat of rape is a permanent fixture within the plums of our consciousness, it has never, in my view, been dealt with in measures that will begin to lessen the degree of that threat, let alone the thought of its non-existence.

Unfortunately, the growing reality of that threat was once again reviewed in the minds of women, when two women were raped on the George Washington University campus. The outrage that resulted from these two recent instances grew into a crisis consciousness which was mainly responsible for the women of GW and OW to call a meeting and invite women to a two-day conference.

The purpose of the conference was to bring together as many of the different aspects of rape as possible. The problem with the thinking of defense and self-defense, demonstrations and lessons in karate.

The conference opened Saturday, April 15th, at 11:00 A.M., with several speakers addressing the audience of about two hundred women.

Ruth Farmers, feminist and psychologist, spoke on the analysis of rape from three different points of view, he explained any of the underlying reasons for rape and the political point of view, by reviewing the studies and research of psychologists and psychotherapists over the years. She explained that their common analysis of sexual deviation was not always attributed to an arrested state of sexual development, but to the psychological trauma, the mental complexes, understanding the rationale in being one, where the raped woman is not to blame for the crime committed with his penis instead of a gun. She named other reasons as being fear of rejection, being sexually inadequate, and fearing human tenderness.

She went on to discuss the psychological analysis of rape first by giving a number of very interesting statistics. She referred to the city of Philadelphia, last year, where 466 cases of rape were reported, (Keep in mind that only 5% to 20% of all rapes reported, leaving a total of 80-95% which are not). 96% of the rapists were black males, 42% were 15-19 years of age. Most of the victims were between 15-19 and 20-24. Their majority of them were mentally unadjusted and could not function from the law. The majority of them were mentally unadjusted and could not function from the law.

The majority of the rapists were reported as being between 15-19 and 20-24. The majority of them were mentally unadjusted and could not function from the law.

She discussed the incestuous rape to a lesser extent, and explained mainly that the victims were usually young girls and that the rapists usually had some type of military background. Being violent men and demanding obedience to them, they often intimidated their victim's into silence ("if you tell money, we won't have a family any more"). She also noted that of the few cases where a child was raped, the rapist would, without a doubt, the mother of the child, and that the child in the one who ends up leaving the family.

The conference then gave the feminist analysis of rape as a socio-cultural phenomenon. She explained that rape was the personalization of sexism, and the economic background should not determine a rapist, a rapist can come from any class background. "Rape is probably the most difficult crime to prove. Most judges when they come in 1979 and 1980, when the police dealt with rape. They described the District's specialty training as rape investigation unit at the best in the country. He went on to reassure the women by informing them that things were going better, and that the District's rape committed in the District last year, "that number wasn't really too many, considering that a half million females make up half the population of the District. And they sympathized with the women, but told us that we must realize just how difficult it is for the police to handle a rape case, and that there are a number of problems."

In the District, we are far more aware of the problem, and many questions must still be asked. In the District, we are far more aware of the problem, and many questions must still be asked. In the District, we are far more aware of the problem, and many questions must still be asked. In the District, we are far more aware of the problem, and many questions must still be asked.

It is true that the rape rate is low, but the number of people who are raped each year is still too high. In the District, we are far more aware of the problem, and many questions must still be asked. In the District, we are far more aware of the problem, and many questions must still be asked.

The entire second day of the conference was devoted to learning self-defense tactics. Four women from the Jane House Institute for Thai Jean Do (forever Purple) gave demonstrations, and also showed the women a number of basic defense mechanisms to use if they are attacked on the streets. Essentially they demonstrated on breaking out of holding positions and militating with blows in a number of vulnerable areas which would incapacitate a rapist, but not enough for a woman to take an escape. We were all surprised that even though a man might have an advantage over a woman, strength is always the woman's advantage, and that one condition to our conditioning, we can pack a hard punch as a man.

In all is said, the conference on the whole was a positive experience which ended with the women realizing that the police were not there to handle our problems. We have to learn to depend on ourselves and to our sisters to watch over and take care of us. Watching the faces of the sisters leaving the conference and seeing their courage and confidence, a fellow sister. I know that everyone walked away from these two days feeling confident, a little more strength, and a lot more sisterhood!
Headache
1) Watermelon tea is said to contain salicylic acid, and is top covered by a cup of boiling water and left to brew for 3-5 minutes will usually do whatever a dose of aspirin would.
2) Willow bark boiled and then simmered for 2 minutes. Drink tea. Aspirin is a synthetic of the ingredient, salicylic acid.
3) Drink a strong cup of peppermint tea then rest for a few minutes.
4) Take a couple of calcium pills.

Insomnia
Sleeplessness generally has to do with tension and nervousness. Of course, you should try to find out what is bothering you, and deal with it however you can. So a lot of deep, abdominal breathing. In relaxing exercises(just on your bed, alternately tense and relax each limb, breathing deeply each time, stretch and relax the stomach by extending it, likewise the chest, scrunch up all the facial muscles, then expand them, opening the eyes wide and sticking out your tongue). Take up yoga. Red.
1) A nice relaxing tea can be made from a tablespoon of hops in a pint of water, simmered for 10 minutes. Drink cup one morning and evening.
2) Use dolomite (calcium and magnesia) with vitamin D in lots of sunlight.
3) Light green, cabbage, lettuce, leafy greens, orange juice.

Constitution
This is usually due to a dietary deficiency, eating too much sugar. The foods produce sugar in the urine which in turn, causes a sugar build up in the body. So let's look at your diet and see what's wrong with it.

Diarrhea
1) This is a sure cure to bind it: 1/4 tip cinnamon and a dash of cinnamon powder in 3/4 cups of water, boil 20 minutes. Cool, strain, and sip as needed. For babies, use 1/8 tsp cinnamon(it's better to use it hopelessly, because American cinnamon is said to be false). This is a symptomatic cure; it doesn't deal with the causes. If you find you are using it too frequently, you probably have something more serious.
2) Fast for a day and let your system cleanse itself.
3) Eat only yoghurt, which quickens the work of the intestines.
4) Drink cups of rhubarb, ginger, clove, raspberry leaf, quince or elderberry leaves over the water.
5) Eat several cloves of garlic a day.
6) Take a bit of apple cider vinegar and a tbl, of honey in a glass of water three times a day.

Clinic needs supplies
The list below shows the kind of supplies the Washington Free Clinic needs to operate. The people who had been giving us these supplies will not be able to do so any longer, and buying them ourselves could drain our finances, so we are asking for your help to give to your clinics.

---We especially need: paper, file folders, reams of paper, large plastic bags, napkins, food, and G.I. chairs.
---We also need: Steno pads, paper clips, paper cups, flashlights, mimo stencils, staplers, tables, toilet paper, hand towels, cloths, sheets, coffee, white aprons, fleshing, paper, alcohol prep, bandages, suture removal kits, cotton swabs, elixir, light cream, x-ray, stethoscopes, ophthalmoscopes, blood pressure cuff, cotton balls, gauze, aluminum foil, paper, disposable pipettes, oral thermometers.

If you're an artist or a graphic artist, we need you to design a Washington Free Clinic button.

---You can't go cheaply by at the clinic, call 965-5476 and we'll try to pick it up.

GLUT holds benefit
The food Co-op, the local food provider, has stated that the food you eat well, but to continue to do so they had to benefit all last Saturday (the 12th) at Georgetown University. GLUT, better known as the food coop, is a non-profit food buying agent and clearinghouse for information about nutrition, food producing, and food co-op buying. GLUT was founded at real estate plan only 10% markup consisting of operating costs and local sales tax.

---Over 300 people came to the benefit which included a craft fair, 30 cent fund-raising dinner and a 50 cent live concert. The full-time GLUT worker I was talking to said that their receipts totalled $550 which was "much more than expected."

---The actual purpose of the benefit besides helping craftpeople get some bread to survive was to defray GLUT's operating costs. These costs cover such things as keeping equipment in their warehouse working, paying for food that people don't pick up and of course the problem caused by having only a 10% markup on food over its actual cost.

---The GLUT staff said that while it does $50,000 a week in business, it needs $5,750 to survive and to operate securely, about $10,000 a week. In order to reach one of those goals they must either find new customers and larger orders or raise prices.

---They also said that another problem was the lack of volunteers to work for them. Presently they are trying to hire two more full-time staff members but until that happens they are asking members of the 50 buying clubs to work the warehouse. The GLUT staff also told me that they would like to raise their salaries from $40 a week to $75 a week if business picks up sufficiently.

---So if you're interested in volunteering to help the coop out or in joining us starting a buying club or just in talking to them about GLUT they can be reached at their warehouse at 779-1078.
Attica Brigade Hits The Streets!

Last November 6, in New York City, the Revolutionary Union, former Weathermen, people and numerous collectives and groups organized a brigade that would militarily participate in the anti-imperialist politics and support prisoners against racist and political attacks.

The group called itself the Attica Brigade and marched in the 10th annual peace picnic march.

According along with such diverse groups as Capital City Peace and the Progressive Labor Party, we put forth our understanding that imperialist wars can only be combated with people’s war, that racist attacks on the Third World colonial and black people are caused by the same class that profits from suppression of the Vietnamese liberation struggle and that the only path for progressive white people is to take part in this fight. So clear at the difference was between our calling for NLF victory and NAPC saying, “Not Now” because the war is too costly for already privileged white people, so were the tactical contradictions between their organizing logic and people to support liberal politicians and our take-to-the-streets strategy.

The Brigade was successful because we worked with people, presenting clear tactical actions temporally lessen our class enemies, our class enemies desire to depoliticize the people and people six times the number who stand against a trading of Chasie Houston Black and the burning of a student ineffably without a single arrest or injury.

Therefore, on April 22, we will distribute our leaflets and sing our chants so that people will understand our tactics and politics and will prepare for later struggle.

The march leaves the Museum of Natural History on Central Park West and 79th Street and will have concrete objectives when it ends at Bryant Park on 42nd Street. For further information, call (202) 531-0551.

Kennedy students strike

On Monday, March 27, a group of about 150-200 students went on strike at St. Paul High School in Wheaton, Maryland. The strike was a result of almost seven months of meetings, petitions, confrontations, and general struggling for the bettering of our school.

After school was out, another teacher was forced to resign, or be fired. That summer ('71), a new principal was appointed to "lighten" up. He was to institute new policies and techniques to bring "order" back to the school. The methods of repression continued with the decision to bring bellas back into the school. We had never had bellas before, and even though bellas in themselves are really not any big thing, it was the idea of it. We came back from a quiet, lazy summer to the ring of some guy who dictates bellas with no concern for faculty or students. In the end, however, that worked out O.K. The bellas were ripped off the walls by some beautiful "wildcats" (a group of the principals), and thus, for the most part, finished it. Then followed a long line of actions on our part to be heard, understood, and helped in our fight to save our school. These included ignominious conferences with the principal, school board members, two petitions, many of us joining P.T.A., sitting in on faculty meetings, and countless other things.

We finally realized that talking without action would get us nowhere. We went on strike. The two main issues were the reinstatement of the original Kennedy philosophy (which mysteriously disappeared this year), and some action on a petition signed by 900 students. We were not nearly together enough as we needed to be. But it was perhaps the closest a large number of us have gotten in a long time. In front of the school there was another group of students (some of them graders) who threw water balloons and stone at the strikers. The administration made little or no attempt to stop them.

It's too early yet to know how much of a success our strike was. But we are in the process of setting up new policies in student groups. So far it looks positive and we give the school board until May 1st for some sort of action or change on their part.

We cannot really use any type of community support. Anyone willing to get into getting pressure on the school board (and others responsible for the running of Kennedy) call 935-4666. For any other kind of help call 949-8833 and ask for Steve.

Let them eat air!!!

The following article is a condemnation of a policy known as "food stamp famine," which we reproduce below along with the following letter. (For a "hut" explanation of food stamps in U.S., see Quick Silver Vol.
4 #1, page 7.)

To the editor:

I am a resident of a small town in the interior of a county in the northeastern part of the state. I am not a farmer, but I do raise a small garden every year. I have been growing vegetables for over 20 years. I get my seeds from the local hardware store and I usually plant them in the spring. I water them every day and I harvest them in the fall. I have never had any problems with pests or disease. I also grow some herbs, such as basil and rosemary, which I use in my cooking. I have always enjoyed growing my own food and I think it is important to support local farmers. I hope this information is helpful. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Food stamp famine $5

The new regulations denying food stamps to those of us alive in isolated households are clearly a form of economic prejudice. The government is seeking to impose its moral standards on the society, which is contrary to any beliefs (such as materialism and individualism) that are based on social, political and religious convictions.

The majority of people in this country are nuclear families, competing with each other in an economic system that is ecologically destructive. Existing regulations and the subsequent tectonic shifts are leading us to a new society, where destruction is the norm. For example, the income tax law discriminates against people who are unable to meet the most pressing needs of their children, by forcing them to work from the cradle to the grave, without having any chance of saving for their future or the future of their families.

In many instances, this has resulted in a pattern of social isolation, because of the lack of social security and social assistance. We are living together partly for the reason of necessity, poor people, living with their friends, lack of social support, and the fact that our social structure is only partially. People who live in unrelated houses or in the same household, and since they don't work, they completely ignore the real demands. Some people get paid money, and there is no productive labor. Some of us work from 40 hours a week or more, for which society provides no compensation. Such people are not in the workforce, but they give priority to that labor. The social registration requirement can force many of us to give up this work and take on useless or oppressive, paying jobs.

It should be clear that the entire food apparatus is this country and the labor of production for food, with it are geared up to achieve just one or private profit. In the case of people who are deprived and allowed to starve, human and natural resources are wasted and the cost. The recent food stamp cutbacks are just one more example of such priority, which makes that slogan a reality. The rulers of American capitalism are determined to find at this time. Speaking on their behalf, Congressman Sullivan, said, "If you started to have food stamps taken away, then people who are hungry would want food, and eventually they would calibrate into a general food program for all."

Not, then, why not free rent? Why not free transportation? Why not free education? Why not free health care? Why not free everything? Why not free everything because there are no jobs available, not because of any moral attributes.

The households here are living...

ARMC Bombing Suspect Nabbed

Our violence against the militarily and the anti-social nature of the universities is our contribution to bringing the Vietnam War to an end. Our job as university students is to build a strong, mass anti-war movement, which education and militancy will aid to defend and build momentum by putting in additional armed forces to protect the universities. In that building process we must refrain from moral self-righteousness and opportunism in making our violence a tool of war. Violence serves only to help in the struggle for human liberation and that struggle is unimportant.

Research Center is and how it relates to the social conditions under which all of us live. We are not an academic research center. Although the first word has been established for public relations purposes. Only the high and mighty researchers, the only citizens of this country, are convinced. According to ARMC 1969 Summary Report to the Army it is a recognized. However, as we have already learned from the experiences of the last 100 years in the U.S., the solution must be the ultimate responsibility for the universities. The solution lies in the fact that the universities and colleges of America possess the resources and facilities to solve the problem of the universities. So let us be in the honorable role of educators.

The solution must be the ultimate responsibility for the universities. The solution lies in the fact that the universities and colleges of America possess the resources and facilities to solve the problem of the universities. So let us be in the honorable role of educators.

On August 24, 1970 with a mixture of nitrogen fertilizer and fuel oil a group calling itself the New Year's Day Movement off the map. The lone occupant Robert Passertsch, a young physicist working in a lab at 4 A.M. on a Monday morning when school was not in session, was killed.

"...as fugitives from U.S. fascism, we have been harried by the forces, the number of streets and homes which take tremendous risks to help and shelter us. This experience, coupled with the psychic and physical brutality of the pigs, allows us to continue in defiance of the administration's revolutionary assault."

On the issue of the army, please be clear that while the army is not responsible for the events of the last 100 years, it is a fact that the universities and colleges of America possess the resources and facilities to solve the problem of the universities. So let us be in the honorable role of educators.

On February 15, 1971, Carlston Lewis was arrested in Toronto as an illegal alien. He had been living there under the name of Dr. Miller. The U.S. is pressing for his removal to face charges in connection with the arrest.

ARMC is being held without bail, waiting the outcome of hearings to determine if the Canadian government will return him to the U.S. for lynding procedures.

The threat of terrorism is an increasing threat to the universities and colleges of America. This is a fact that the universities and colleges of America possess the resources and facilities to solve the problem of the universities. So let us be in the honorable role of educators.

The war in IndoChina is increasingly being automated. As troops are withdrawn, the war doesn't wind down, but rather omni-existent with technology -- with societies, brother and sister, animals and trees. The war is no less deadly but more remorseless. This is possible because of the investigation done by the ARMC and similar centers at universities around the country. Likewise, the work they are conducting now will become easier and less automated as they become more sophisticated.
LONG LIVE THE
THE VICTORY OVER THE WAR!
Dear people,

I would like to correct some mistakes in the June 12 article you published. It has been reported recently that the CIA moved out of the Javits Center building more than five or six months ago. All stories about laws and costs are pure and are being removed (deloused). However, a CIA hardcopy to locate in the 100 North Main St., the halls burning with documents or money, ready to be printed, before producing anything, as far as we can see, anyone should realize we are like them. (Stoned people)

Since, I hope, I'll be within a small way and will hand when my chance comes how to go to New York I'll get stoned for you.

Power to the people, OK

Dear Quicksilver,

Shocking Good! I'm subscribing for a year in hopes of finding out how to grow financially down our papers. I was a banker in the early 70's at the City Planet before I became army. I don't want to be here, but I don't believe in the facts, as well, I'm in a fucked company. I don't believe in capital or on in conservative although I have some hair left. I'm one of the ones who do the legal hair (G.77) type still ripped off when we come to get what people should realize we are like them. (Stoned people)

Since, I hope, I'll be within a small way and will hand when my chance comes how to go to New York I'll get stoned for you.

Power to the people, OK

Dear Quicksilver Times,

A beautiful victory has been won by the surviving Napolitano Brothers. The Supreme Court, however, has now set a high price. The deaths of Johnstone and John Archibald, the incorporation and trial of Napa Park, the exepensive court case and the flooding challenge to the version Napolitano Brothers, Montana Dennis and John Chuchette, have all been direct consequences of the fabricated charges. This is clear.

The message is clear: the only violations are those the people speak out and demand. They are working for a victory. John Chuchette wrote last year: "Our right only lies in the people's endeavor to hear our protest and support our case."

Dear Quicksilver Times,

Recently the underground press circulated a story that the U.S. President smoked pot. Even the most respectable papers, like the Ann Arbor Daily, the Berkeley TRIBUNE, and the QUICKSILVER TIMES ran it, as well as the Special Edition UPS Paper put out for the Washington DC-area. It's a nice fantasy, but that's all it is for.

The origin of the story was about two years ago in a tabloid scandal sheet called MED. RIGHT, put out in Canada and distributed in Chicago. One of my advisors sent me a copy when it first came out, so I checked up on it. Back in 1969 I was told that Washington grew hemp in the vineyard at St. Vermum which I verified by going through his collected writings, digging out the 8 s or 10 references, and established as fact: he wanted it for home use, but then there's the diary reference in the MEXICAN HERITAGE Republic annals separating male from female plants. A process undertaken annually only when dope is desired).

I'd also heard that Jefferson smoked pot and was stoned when he wrote the Declaration of Independence, but that I checked out and it's not true, or at least not mentioned in his writings anywhere that I could find.

First, I called up MINDOFF to ask for the writer of the story. He was "out of town on extended vacation" - later I discovered this was standard operating procedure when magazines publish fiction as if it were fact. Next I called Washington DC information to ask for the "American Historical Reference Society" whose president, Mr. Burke, had supposedly supplied the information for the MINDOFF article, and was quoted extensively in the "American Historical Reference Society" article.

I then tried the MEXICAN HISTORICAL SOCIETY, a well-established research foundation, and the secretary there told me that their phone had been

Speed Freak

Being a speed freak is a lot like taking a roller-coaster ride a million miles long. After the fun is over you may not be able to stop the ride. And it doesn’t matter much how fast you are, or how tired of going up and down, or over and over again.

My friends who know speed agree that the following will describe the effects of methedrine crystal: Intelligence seems to rise by ten or fifteen percent in as many minutes after the injection. The user suddenly has enough stamina to listen to the most laborious person he knows for several hours and then smash his ego with a couple of well-chosen words. A sexual energetic with a neck half a dozen shades too red for his company suddenly masters more alike than Dick Cooentuy, were still than law secure.

For the oppressive personality speed is euphoria. For the Huxley it may offer strength to project ideas and influence others’ thoughts.

Artist turns critical, critics become withdraw; drugs with natural tendencies find a playground with no horizons. Efficiency replaces abstraction; thought becomes an obsession. Some of my friends used to say, “I want to stop eating, sleeping and existing.”

A few of us are not so different from the opiates which are said to introduce earlark to a feeling of life. At first, to anyone else, will produce a feeling more than a sense, vaguely organic feeling, similar to that experienced when one sleeps too much, a few rather guilty dreams, and in the less half of the high, profound horror.

A price paid for the warm, allows twice the capacity of the heart. A speed freak’s legs from shooting up are often just as fast as the effects of speed.

With speed, the epic mania begins much more quickly, as soon as the mind associates effect with instrument. It spreads across as with the opiates, comes with the speed, only physical and mental energy.

There have never been a heavy hit of crystal the user will have passed the points of its effects. The high is controlled and thought is highly rational but the decline into fatigue will have begun. Assuming you’re not a real habitué you’ll have found something very interesting to do. Now it makes sense to take another hit. This time the results are not so pleasing but you can get back into a good conversation within a few minutes.

If you smoke cigarettes, I never have a speed freak who didn’t just be, you would be found far too much by now. That and chefs have become uncomfortable, you’re increasingly thirsty, your back begins to ache.

The second injection feels of a new world. With the third or fourth shot these things become really tedious. Energy becomes hostility, people begin to move irritable or walls, speak evasively or only to police.

As the city outside is becoming flimsy with moving traffic, you realize to your room, will the curtains to shut out the day’s idea and light and its done. Your mind still rare, uncontrollably changing shapes, forms and saying something else over and over. As a diversion from that and from increasing physical discomfort, you turn on any television for three or four hours.

Then your eyes begin to sway, shut them and then learn terribly. You realize you’ve needed to the patience been gone, and you become aware of an object flying in your eyes and blinders. While going to urinate, a purple blindness falls around you like a bag. You hold to a door to keep from falling and gradually get back to bed.

A finger to your throat and the head to black once more, with your heart is pumping a hundred and sixty times a minute. Do still and it flies down, close your eyes and ashamed the burning again. They feel as big as watermelons now, imperceptibly down.

Drift into a waking dream of people who sit talking in strange and marvelous sublimates. A little vio-lence in your bag has begun to twist like a dusty nail beneath the skin. Stick! Your eyes fill open, scaled and watering into an upper world as vast and hidden as a Pinellas prison.

Something daily heard in the routines of the underdog is beating with hurt and rage. You want to cry for it. Turning to someone on the bed beside you, you find a person almost unrecognizably changed, on some great stag or fantastic insect with a skinny skull where the friendly face should be.

Nebulae of your hands and legs cream, becoming useless with your loneliness. At this time you will be wondering how you could endure such physical pain as it has taken over and you. That you probably couldn’t do it without the stone.

Spectral people stand in corners, shadows deep across the room, here and there door creeps and close where no doors should, where lightning pulses on the ceiling. You drain a violent wave where terrible parodies of humanity with frigid familiar faces move to the shattered cadences of a condemning voice you can’t quite hear. Finally you sleep, only to wake up two hours, high without another hit.

Four days later you will realize you still haven’t slept soundly. If you have any more crystal, you’ll be back before you are straight, I have never known a speed freak who could let it alone for twelve hours.

Consider the effects from rotting your teeth and the cruel physical effects, will bring the substance of your nightmares into waking situations unless you use now and works speed. Eventually you won’t be able to sleep without it.

I had a strong needle habit for seven months. I broke it by the proestrit of efforts, two years ago. Since then I have done five short turns on ingested speed. The last one, only a night long, took me two weeks to get over. I still have a strong temptation to use the stuff when it’s available.

On the rare occasions when I see the stuff, I usually can’t feel a consciousness of the benefits and to me it seems violently that it would be impossible to get a needle into my vein. If someone else tries to sit with me, the rush shrinks at the approach of the-\n

U.S. bleeds Haiti

Backed by a clinical staff of over a hundred Haitians, the forty-seven cats in the blood-plasma center are usually all occupied from six-thirty in the morning until ten at night. In Port au Prince, Haiti, the first clinic of a U.S. blood-plasma enterprise is extracting plasma for freezing and export. The operation is called Hemo Caribbean. It is a project headed by Joseph B. Gorinstein, a stockbroker with interests in Miami and New York. Lured by payments of from $1.50 to $3.00 a pint, hundreds of hungry and ragged citizens of the Haitian capital flock to the Hemo Caribbean blood-plasma clinic each day. In this small and poverty-stricken Caribbean island-nation where the per capita income is less than $100.00 per year, some Haitians now earn more from sales of their blood plasma than from all other combined sources of income. In referring to the mostly well-nourished and offline barefoot donors who come to his clinic to sell their plasma, Joseph B. Gorinstein describes the Haitian plasma, "a hell of a lot cleaner than that which comes from the sluice of some of our U.S. cities."

Established in the early part of 1971, and operating under a ten-year contract with the government of Haiti, the Hemo Caribbean company was buying some 10,000 pints a month before the end of its first year in Haiti. After extraction the plasma is taken from the blood following which operation the blood is pumped back into the donors body. Admitting to a profit of over a dollar a pint from its Haiti operation, Hemo Caribbean has been marketing 50 percent of its Haitian plasma in the United States. The remaining 50 percent has been going to Sweden and West Germany. The company reports that mounting U.S. demands are so great that it plans to expand present blood-plasma facilities in Haiti to handle more than double its present capacity of from three hundred to four hundred donors a day. A low incidence of drug addiction in Haiti makes the tiny Caribbean country's blood plasma donors preferred over many U.S. donors, of whose number a heavy percentage is addicted to drugs. In fact, so financially attractive are future prospects of extracting blood plasma from our hungry and ragged neighbors that Gorinstein's Hemo Caribbean company is planning expansion of its plasma extraction business into other parts of Latin America. But let us make one thing perfectly clear: we are not extracting plasma from the blood of our good Latin American neighbors without paying extra for premium quality. For Hemo Caribbean plasma extraction center in Haiti is paying an extra dollar a pint to donors who have had tetanus shots. Should they love our...

IN THE HEART

OF THE BEAST

We offer a developmental alternative in undergraduate education for those who want to affect the structure and priorities of our society.

Programs in the arts, communications, video, urban studies, social sciences, mental health, community development, education, basic human problems, political sciences, law, environmental science, etc.

Our sliding scale tuition enables students to attend who might otherwise be unable to afford a quality education.

A concurrent work/study program helps students find meaningful jobs to support themselves and complement course work and individual and group projects.

We feel that college and universities must respond to the needs of the communities that surround them and not just to their own needs.

Our campus is located in three areas: Washington, Columbia and Baltimore.

We are now considering applicants for Summer and Fall, 1972.

The continuing story of GOD

Gentlemen as you know the youth of the nation has become a prime market area, for the automobile industry. However, the GYPSY has been working night and day on a model that will appeal to a specific market segment.

Gentlemen.... the "mr. natural"

If you'll step this way, it's the room.

Notice the youth appealing features: "captain america" seat covers with seats that fold out into a mattress, painted shag carpeting, black-lit interior, zodiac steering wheel, and a secret Sparo compartment.

No more than a week later...

This is it, baby. Advertised in Playboy and Rolling Stone.

In the desert...
